POETICAL.

THE NEW BIRTH.

BY HERMAN MERIVALE.

God spake in a voice of thunder,
Of old from Sinai's hill;
And the mystic words of wonder
Thrill the believer still:
He sees in the vault above him,
With the eye of faith alone,
Gemmed round by the souls that love Him,
The great Creator's throne.

He sees—in the day of danger—
The column of cloud that led
From the land of the alien stranger
His Israel, whom he fed;
And knows—tho' his footsteps wonder
Astray in the twilight land—
That his home is building yonder,
By the one unerring hand.

He sees, in the night of peril,
The pillar of fire that shone
From the hills of the pearl and beryl,
To light God's children on;
And feels that straight from heaven,
When the eye of sense grows dim,
Shall a grander sight be given
To all who trust in him.

On the page of the mighty ocean
He reads the mightier still
Who curbs its restless motion
By the law of His royal will;
And while in its course diurnal
It murmurs or sings or raves,
He lists to the voice eternal,
In the language of the waves.

He marks in the plants around him
The throbs of a life their own,
While the worldless world that bound him
Whisper their undertone.
From the hawk and the hound yet clearer
He hears the secret fall,
Which nearer to him and nearer
Brings the great God of all.

In leaves that blow and perish
In the space of a single hour,
As the love that most we cherish
Die like the frailest flower,
In the living thing whose living
Withers or e'er they bloom,
He reads of the great thanksgiving
Which breathes from the open tomb.

The bright spring leaves returning
To the stem whence autumn's fell,
And the heart of summer burning
To change at the winter's spell,
The year that again repasses,
The grain that again revives,
Are signs on the darkened glasses
That bar and bound our lives.

I know how the glass must darken
To my visions more and more,
When the weak ear strains to harken,
When the faint eye gazes o'er,
But the glass shall melt and shiver,
Once kissed by the fighting breath,
And the light behind the river
Shine full in the face of death.

Strong set in a strong affection,
We look at the golden prime,
When a mightier resurrection
Shall burst on the doubts of time:
And the thoughts of all the sages,
Like the waves of the fretful main,
At the base of the Rock of Ages,
Shall foam and fume in vain.

SELECT STORY.

A REAL SWEET STORY.

It was far the worst quarrel they ever had, and they had had many, for she had a temper, and he had a temper, and they were both of them impulsive young people with very little self-control.

"You are a false, selfish, untruthful, unmanlike man," said she.

"And you a suspicious, unreasonable, unwomanly woman," said he.

"Take back your letters," she cried, flinging a parcel tied with hyacinth blue ribbon on the floor at his feet.

"I will," he muttered between his clenched teeth, picking up a parcel and throwing it into the fire, where it blazed brightly for a moment or two and then flew away in uncanny black fragments up the chimney. As the last fragment disappeared Rick turned again to Letty, with frowning brow, and asked, as he asked before, "Do you still persist in accusing me of deceit and falsehood?"

"I do," she replied, "unless you show me the charm."

"I will not show it to you," he declared, with violent emphasis. "If my word be not sufficient, I refuse to give you further proof. I wonder that you dare insult me by asking it. And I also wonder how you, believing me to be false and untruthful, can be willing to trust your future to me. And, to speak frankly, I begin to think we have made a great mistake in supposing that we could spend the future happily together, for I am fully convinced that we are anything but

"'Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one.'"

(These lines were quoted with the most sarcastic inflection). "And furthermore, I also begin to think that perhaps it would have been better if we had never made this mistake—if we had never met, in fact."

"Oh, indeed, sir!"—with great assumption of dignity. "Have you just arrived at the conclusion? I have long been sure of it. But there is nothing easier than to part. Your letters are already disposed of. To morrow I will send back your ring and picture. And then, when I am free once more, I can try to please my mother (our acquaintance, as you are well aware, has never pleased her), and in pleasing her I may find I am doing a pleasant as well as a wise thing for myself."

"Are you referring to Brougham Brown?"

"I am referring to Brougham Brown."

"By heavens!" exclaimed Rick, seizing his hat, "this is too much. Letty, good by forever!"

But Letty began humming an air from "Patience," drumming an accompaniment on the window pane, and vouchsafed no answer. Rick rushed from the room. The humming and drumming ceased instantly, and the whilom performer listened intently. Five minutes passed, and still the street door did not slam. "He is waiting for me to come out in the hall and beg his pardon, I suppose," she said, with a defiant grimace, but I won't; and she turned again to the window as the door shut with a bang.

And then she flung herself on the lounge, kicked off her slippers, and cried like a summer shower. Rick gone, and gone "forever!" Rick, whom she had loved so dearly, and who had loved her so dearly, for two long years. And why? Just because that silly, giggling Lena Varian, with her pale blue eyes and straw colored hair had chosed to tell fibs about him. And, shaking the tears from her lashes, she began scolding herself as she had scolded poor Rick. "The idea, Letty Lousberry, of you believing that girl before him! What possessed you?"

"He did flirt a little with her, that is true; but all men flirt a little with girls who persist in admiring them and flattering them. But he never gave her the little gold pig—your Christmas gift to him—never! How she got it I can't imagine, but he would have explained it you had given him a chance." And then the absent mother, who had gone to Aunt Emory's for a two day's visit, came in for a share of reproach. "If she had only let our engagement be known, instead of waiting until Rick was twenty one, and I had been obliged to carry my engagement ring in my back hair, the only place where it is safe from Baby's—goodness gracious! Baby!" And Letty suddenly remembered that ever since Rick came in to make a morning call, knowing Mrs. Lousberry was absent—poor fellow! he'd have stayed away if he could have forseen his reception—Baby had been sitting alone in the dining room in the middle of the big dining table surrounded by all the pickle and marmalade jars and fruit cans and catsup bottles and fruit jars out of the store-room. For it was the monthly house-cleaning day, and the store room fell to Letty's share, the foreign help being gifted with too great a talent for mashing and breaking, to say nothing of an equally great talent for abstracting and devouring both sweets and sours.

Letty sprang from the lounge, thrust her feet into her slippers, and hastened where duty had been calling her for some time. Baby sat, as good as gold, nursing a bottle of tomato sauce, snugly wrapped in a dish-towel, in the very spot where she had been when Rick's ring summoned her sister to the door. Only one small flask lay broken on the floor, filling the air with the subtle fragrance of garlic. "That won't be missed," said Lettie. "Thank fortune, there is no worse mischief done." But the "thank" was scarcely uttered when her eyes fell upon the last jar of the famous peach marmalade, the secret of the making which died with grandmamma, and which was being carefully kept for Aunt Emory's (Aunt Emory was an old maid worth $30,000) birthday. There it stood directly in front of Baby, with more than half of its thick paper hat torn off, and a yawning cavity made in its precious contents by little scooping fingers.

"Oh, Baby, why couldn't you have taken any jar but that?" asked Letty, reproachfully and dramatically.

But Baby evidently had no excuse to offer for not doing so, for she kept on crowing to her bottle doll, while her sister hastily fashioned another paper hat and tied it securely over what remained of the original covering.

Then said baby: "Rick tiss I—nice Rick!"

"Oh, that is what he was doing when she foolishly imagined he was waiting for her to come and implore her forgiveness—giving good-by to Baby. She might have known it, for he had always loved Baby dearly.

"Yes, Baby, nice Rick, good Rick, dear Rick; but for all that the ring he gave me goes back to-morrow unless I hear from him to ight. How dare he wish that we had never met?"

But she did not hear from him that night, and the next day the little band of gold was released from its hiding place in her thick brown hair, and a too-faithful messenger placed it in Rick's hands as he left his place of business. But, ah! what a silent, sorrowful maiden wandered about the Lousberry dwelling thereafter! what a listless, weary voice repeated the nursery rhymes that Baby demanded fifty times a day!

"No nice—no more," said Baby, missing the merry tones and the happy laugh.

But Mrs. Lousberry was not at all displeased with the turn affairs had taken. Brougham Brown suited her much better as a prospective son-in-law than Richard Creighton. One was a wealthy young brewer, the other a poor clerk in a counting house.

"Letty will soon get over it," she said to Letty's father, whose heart ached at sight of his daughter's sad face. "A first love disappointment is always hard to bear for a while. I thought I should have died when Stephen Ford married my cousin; but I didn't; I lived to marry you, and I have a seal-skin cloak, and Mrs. Ford hasn't even a jacket."

And Brougham Brown, who was really a manly, generous, good-hearted fellow in spite of his beer and wealth, encouraged by the maternal head of the house began devoting himself in the most ardent fashion to Letty; and she, seeing her mother's pleasure thereat, and hearing no word from Rick, received his attentions in a passive, unresponsive way.

Three months went by, and it was Aunt Emory's birthday, and that eccentric old lady had decided to divide it among the family, lunching with one portion, dining with another, and supping with a third. The lunch party was given at her sister Lettia's (Mrs. Lousberry), and some half a dozen old friends and some dozen relatives were bidden to the feast. Letty in a seagreen gown (Rick's favorite gown), with a spray of pink hyacinths (Rick's favorite spring flower) in her hair, went quietly about welcoming the guests, Brougham Brown following her like a shadow, until lunch was announced. Then taking her place at the table, the young man still near her, she raised the cover from and dipped a spoon into the last jar of grandmamma's famous peach (she had it placed before her, trusting to be able to hide the mischief Baby had done), when somebody said, addressing her mother: "Have you heard that Richard Creighton is going abroad for his health? He has given up his situation, and sails in a day or two. They say he has failed lately.

And the very next moment Aunt Emory fixed her spectacled eyes upon her niece's poor, pale face, and asked, sharply: "What is the matter, child? Do you see anything dreadful in the swee:s?"

"No, ma'am," answered Letty, with a pitiful attempt at a smile, when the spoon struck something harder than preserved peaches should be.

"Let me help you," said Brougham; and with one turn of his wrist he placed upon the dainty china shell before her—a wad of paper.

"And so that is the last of the celebrated marmalade, is it?" asked Aunt Emory. "I don't want any. I prefer my sweets unmixed with unknown foreign substances. Take it away, Norah."

But Letty was already slowly unrolling the paper (it proved to be the missing part of the jar's original hat)—a rather difficult thing to accomplish, as it stuck persistently to her small fingers, but accomplished at last, when out rolled the little gold pig. And on the inside of the paper was scrawled in Rick's bold hand, these words:

"MY DARLING: How foolish we are—I mean, I am! Here is the charm. Miss Varian had it about ten minutes last night—only long enough to show it to you and tell you a story about it. Baby will give it to you. Had no paper, so I tore a piece off one of your jam pots. Will see you to-morrow evening. RICK."

Never did any young lady so suddenly break through all the conventionalities of society; never did daughter so quickly forget the wishes of her mother; never did niece so unflinchingly brave the displeasure of a thirty-thousand dollar aunt, as did Letty Lousberry the instant she had read this note.

"Brougham," she cried, looking at him with beautiful, beseeching eyes, "I must see Rick. I must—I must! You will go and bring him to me dear?"

It was the first time she had ever called him "dear," and, alas! he felt that it would be the last. For a moment he pulled his long mustache nervously. "We are not very good friends, you know," at last he said.

"Yes, I know, but I am to blame for that, too," said Letty, hurriedly. "Forgive me, Brougham, but I must see Rick."

And the good fellow, hesitating no longer, turned from that imploring face, and, with a tugging at his heart-strings, went off to seek his rival. He found him and brought him back to the girl they both loved.

And what do you think Aunt Emory did? Aunt Emory, who had declared over and over again that only as Mrs. Brougham Brown, Letty should inherit any of her mony, "Left the house in a passion?" Not a bit of it. She laughed and laughed until she could laugh no longer.

"Now I shall have something new to tell folks," she said. "They must be tired and sick of my old yarns, I'm sure I am. Love, gold pigs, jealousy and marmalade all mixed up together. It's one of the funniest things I ever heard in all my life."

"I'm glad you think so," said Mrs. Lousberry. "It don't strike me that way. What are they going to live on?"

"Oh, I'll look after them," said Aunt Emory; and her remark makes a very good ending to this real sweet story.

Useful to Know.

GINGER WAFERS.—Nice ginger wafers are made of one cup of sugar, one cup of butter, one cup of molasses, half a cup of cold coffee left from breakfast, two even teaspoonfuls of soda, one tablespoonful of ginger and flour enough to make a stiff dough; knead it hard and roll very thin, and bake in a quick oven.

RENOVATING SATIN.—Satin can be renovated in the same way that velvet often is—that is, by taking a hot iron, placing a wet cloth over it and holding the satin in the steam, the wrong side nearer the heat. Of course, when the satin is worn off this does no good, but when it is crushed or wrinkled the effect is surprisingly good.

SAVORY OMLETTE.—Beat two eggs in a basin, season with cayenne and salt, mix with it a teaspoonful of finely chopped onion and parsley; melt one-half ounce of butter in an omlette pan, pour the mixture into this, and keep stirring over the fire until it sets, then roll and serve. About three minutes will do to cook this omlettte, which should be of a delicate brown when done.

PEA SOUP.—Take a quart of shelled peas, boil the pods in a gallon of cold water until all the substance is boiled out of them, then skim them out and put two pounds of beef into the pot. After the meat is boiled to shreds skim the soup well, strain and return to the pot. Add the peas, with a little parsley, and let it simmer until the peas are quite tender; season with pepper and salt, thicken with a little butter and flour, let it boil up once and serve.

COOKING FISH.—When you are cooking fish do not leave it lying in the pan in which it was fried after it is done; it will absorb the fat, and the delicate flavor will be destroyed. Be sure that it is done, and then remove it at once to a platter. People who say that they cannot eat fish on account of its oily, indigestible qualities do not know that in most cases it is not the fish that is to blamed for this, but the careless cook who allows it to spoil after it is cooked.

DRY LIMA BEANS.—Wash one quart of dry Lima beans in two warm waters; soak three hours, drain, and put on to cook in enough boiling water to cover them. Cover the pot with a tin lid, adding more hot water as it boils away, boiling rapidly one and a half hours, when there should be only water enough to come up to the top of the beans—just sufficient to make a nice dressing. Five minutes before taking up, season with salt and pepper, and stir in a dressing made of one tablespoonful each of flour and butter rubbed together until smooth. This is a delicious dish.

VERMIN ON CANARIES.—"L. C." asks what she can do to remove lice from her canary. A pet bird of my own being afflicted so deeply in this way that he did not sing at all, and seemed to be tired of life, I tried this remedy with success: I put a little of the flowers of sulphur in a thin muslin bag and tied it to a wire in the cage; as he hopped back and forth he would hit the bag, and the sulphur powder would sift out on him. In a week he commenced to sing, and in a short time he was restored to health. If the bird loses feathers it is a good plan to scatter a little sulphur under his wings and to put a very little in the water in his bath tub. Keep the cage clean and put fine sand on its floor.

RELIEF TO THE FEET.—Every woman who is obliged to stand for hours at the ironing table during July and August finds that her feet are prolific sources of suffering. Even if she is wise enough to wear thick-soled shoes, she will find her lot a hard one. One little thing can be done to relieve her somewhat: Take an old comforter, or part of one, fold it in just as many thicknesses as is possible to make it soft, and yet perfectly easy to stand on. Her feet will be cooler, and when she is through with her work she will not be as tired as usual, and her feet will not have the stinging and burning sensation which is as hard to bear as pain is. It is a good plan to have a good supply of holders, so that she can change them often.

Hotel Life in Sicily.

Charles Dudley Warner writes as follows: We found at Syracuse, another Sicilian hotel worthy of mention. This is the Locanda del Sole. It is only about half as dear as the Vittoria, which we tried first; but it is a little worse. We did not understand, at first, why there were no bells in any part of the dirty house, but we soon discovered that there was nothing to be had if we could have rung for it. It is a very old and not uninteresting sort of barracks, and its rambling terraces give good views of the harbor and of Ætna. The rooms, too, are adorned with quaint old prints, which give it an old-time air. It can be fairly said of its management that the attendance is as good as the food.

I do not know how long it would take to starve a person to death there, or to disgust him with victuals to that extent that death would seem preferable to dining, but we touched close upon the probable limit of endurance in five days. It was a lengthy campaign of a morning to get a simple early breakfast. It was a work of time, in the first place, to find anybody to serve it. When the one waiter was discovered and coaxed into the dining room, I ordered coffee and the usual accompaniments. In about fifteen minutes he brought in a pot of muddy liquid and a cup. I suggested then, in reason, a spoon ought to go with it. A spoon was found after some search—sugar also, I got by importunity. The procuring of milk was a longer process. Evidently the goat had to be hunted up.

By the time the goat came to terms the coffee was cold. I then brought up the subject of bread. That was sent out for and delivered. Butter, also, was called for, not that I wanted it, or could eat it when it came, but because butter is a conventional thing to have for breakfast. This butter was a sort of poor cheese gone astray. The last aricle to be got was a knife. The knives were generally very good, or would have been if they had been clean. By patience, after this, you could have a red mullet and an egg and some sour oranges. All the oranges in Sicily are sour. The reason given for this, however, is that all the good ones are shipped to America. The reason given in America why all the Sicily oranges are sour is that all the good ones are kept at home.

When the traveler reaches Malta and Tangier he will learn what an orange really is. I do not know that I can say anything more in favor of the Hotel Sole, except they were as indifferent to our departure as to our comfort while we staid. We left at 10 o'clock at night to take the train for Malta. We procured a facchino outside to move our luggage, and not a soul connected with the hotel was there. The landlord had exhausted himself making out our bills. There was some difficulty in separating our several accounts, and when the landlord at last brought a sheet of paper on which the various items were set in order, and the figures were properly arranged, he regarded his work with justifiable pride, and exclaimed "It is un con a magnifico." We agreed with him that, in some respects, the account was magnificant.

Pennsylvania Forests.

We are glad to perceive that some interest is at last beginning to be taken in the subject of preserving the Pennsylvania forests, which are threatened with complete destruction. The Pittsburg Post informs us that the State Board of Agriculture, which recently met at Harrisburg, took steps to ascertain what proportion the timber land of the state bears to the entire acreage. Since then statistics which have been obtained indicate that about one fourth of the ascerage is woodland, and that its tendency is toward a marked decrease in quantity. The chairman of the committee on forests and forestry, Wm. S. Roland, of York, foresees impaired health and comfort of the people, and deleterious effects upon the business relations of the state, if the destruction of Pennsylvania forests, is allowed to go on without something being done in the way of repair. "Trees are the dominating members of the vegetable kingdom. They are the necessary factors in the sum total of those influences which constitute the environment of animal life. Trees, by absorbing carbonic gas and emitting oxygen, act as agents in rendering the atmosphere life-sustaining. By interposing their foliage between the sun and the earth, they serve a useful purpose in shelterng the soil from the heat, and as conductors of heat, in equalizing the temperature of the earth and the air. The forest, too, guards the soil against abrasion and displacement from torrents and overflows and thus again exerts its conservative influence for man's good. We need trees for the delight they afford, as at once the most majestic, imposing and beautiful of nature's vegetable forms. The state cannot afford and should not much longer withold, or refuse to give the subject of our forests its most serious attention." Mr. Roland notes the encouragement which tree planting is receiving in other states, and thinks these examples should be imitated in Pennsylvania. He suggests intelligent legislation, the organization of local agricultural societies, and the support of the State Board of Agriculture. In this way much good could be accomplished, in his judgement, toward creating public sentiment with regard to the question, and starting a general movement for the repair of the wastes which have been made in the forests of Pennsylvania.

THE "RULING PASSION."—A pointed example of the influence of the "ruling passion" is recorded of one of the toll keepers in Scotland. These tolls are gradually disappearing off the face of—if not of the earth, at any rate of Scotland. Many and varied are the recollections that linger around these tollhouses. In the case in question the lessee's wife had been taken sick nigh unto death. The services and the sympathies of the clergyman were called in. The reverend gentleman was asked to engage in prayer at the bedside. He did so, and began, "O Lord—"

"Whisht!" interrupted the feeble woman, "I think I hear a cart."—EDITOR'S DRAWER, in Harper's Magazine for August.

How He Threw Her Love Away.

"I do not believe you."

Ethelbert McGuire winced as Myrtle Hathaway spoke these words—cruel, bitter words, that seemed to sear his very soul as he stood there in the gloaming, the time of silence and shadows. The swallows were twittering among the leaves in their noisy way, the ice cream lairs were casting their baleful light across the broad thoroughfare, from which the rattle, the roar, and the crash of life in a great city had just departed.

"You cannot mean it, Myrtle," the young man says, his voice choked with emotion. "You surely cannot doubt my word—the word of one to whom you have plighted your troth, and in whose life your future is bound up."

"But I do mean it," replied the girl, although God knows my life would be brighter, better, happier were it not so. I have loved you with a strong country-butter love that has become a part of my very existence. And it is when I have taught my heart to beat responsive to your every word, when I have come to believe in you with all the passionate trustfulness of a woman's nature, that you come to me, and here, on this beautiful June evening, when the heavens are panoplied with stars, and the air is balmy with the perfume of roses, you say to me that you have never bet on a horse race—you tell me this solemnly and earnestly, knowing that my heart will not let me judge harshly any action of yours. No, Ethelbert; I love you with a maddening, ninety-days or ten-per-cent-off-for-cash trust that is beyond compare, but I cannot let you abuse that trust. I am but a girl—a sensitive, passionate, one-bustle-and-a-four-dollar-bang girl, but I am not a chump"—and Myrtle turned to enter the parlor.

"But I swear it!" exclaimed Ethelbert. "I swear to you that I would not bet four dollars against ten that Maud S. could beat three minutes."

"You would not?" asked the girl.

"No," was the reply, "I would not bet on anything."

"Then," said the girl, speaking slowly and with grave tenderness, "you had better head for the gate. I can never place my happiness and chances for spring bonnets in the hands of a man who would let so sure a thing as that get away.—Chicago Tribune.

The Language of the Face.

It is surprising how much can be learned from the face. Physiognomy seldom lies. This lady with the diamonds in her ears is not a person of position. Her dress is faultless, her movements elegant; she is very handsome, but, "somehow you know." It is that peculiar, half-doubtful, half supercilious expression of hers that tells its own story. She is at once defiant and ashamed. Yonder sits an ill dressed, far from handsome, middle-aged woman, but there is a gracious, matronly look upon her face. You place her at once as an honest wife and careful mother. You have no doubt of her, nor of the girl at her side, her daughter. The language of the face is very plainly written, if one will only learn to read it. I think if girls knew this—if they took it to heart and believed it—it would be well for them. This wish to look well is strong in all feminine hearts: with this end in view they will starve or take bitter medicine, rub bismuth or arsenic upon their faces, cover their hands and foreheads with sticky pastes on retiring, and forbid themselves fresh, breezy walks or pleasant sails for fear of tanning. Yet, at the same time, they will think and do many things which stamp an expression not to be coveted upon their young faces, and quite forget that, after all, the face is but a vase which the lamp of the soul illuminates, and that the best beauty comes from within.

How the Judge Crossed the Stream.

"We were riding along the road one chilly day in November," said General Craig, talking about court business and legal talent "when we struck a small stream that appeared to be about thirty yards wide. 'Hello,' said Judge Norton, of Missouri, 'this is a new stream to me. How shall we cross it?' Taking advantage of his ignorance, I pretended to survey the situation, and after emerging from the thicket I solemnly inquired: Judge, can you swim?' 'Like a fish,' he replied, while his eyes twinkled in the expectation of displaying his ability in that direction. 'I can't,' said I, 'so suppose you strip and swim across, testing the debth as you go, and give me the advantage of your experience. 'All right,' he said dismounting from his horse. Then he removed all his clothes, tied them together, placed them safely between his teeth, and started cautiously into the creek. I choked my handkerchief into my mouth to keep from laughing, while the judge gravely waded across through exactly four inches of water; but you would have died to

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

—FRIDAY JULY 28th, 1882.—

THE COLUMBIAN will pay a reward of fifty dollars to the first person or persons who will furnish evidence to convict any candidate or other person in this county of a violation of the act of Assembly relating to election expenses, in the present campaign. Whoever secures the county nominations must obtain them fairly, and not by the use of money. If there is any truth in the charges that are made every year after the county convention, it is time the alleged practices were stopped. Reform next year will not do.

Judge Pershing is a candidate for re-election in Schuylkill county.

Professor George W. Atherton of Rutgers college, New Jersey, will succeed General Beaver as president of the agricultural college near Bellefonte.

The headquarters of the Democratic State committee have been established by Chairman Hensel at the Girard House, Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Press is carefully making arrangements to get down on the Beaver side of the fence. Before the campaign is over its editor will be making stalwart speeches through the state.

The atrocious crime of being a young man is what the stalwart organs are charging Pattison with. Walpole accused Pitt of the same crime some years ago, and Walpole got the worst of it.

In a speech at Bristol last week General Beaver said that "Don Cameron is not a big man, he is a small man." He afterwards explained that he meant physically, of course.

Attorney General Brewster has rendered an opinion to the effect that the political assessments made by Hubbell are not illegal as Hubbell is not an officer of the United States. Being a member of a stalwart administration, Brewster was compelled to file a stalwart opinion.

As announced some time ago, Judge Elwell has consented to be a candidate for renomination as President Judge of the 26th district, and his name will therefore go before the people of this county at the delegate election on August 5th. There is no other candidate in the field.

The officers of the delegate election should bear in mind that the law requires them to be sworn before entering upon their duties. A failure to comply with this law may not only exclude the entire vote of a district from the convention, but may be punished on conviction by a fine of two hundred dollars.

If congress does not soon adjourn its members will not be able to take an active part in the campaign in their districts. This would be a blessing to the districts.—Gazette & Bulletin.
Yes, a good thing for the districts, but as it is a republican congress the longer they remain in session the worse it is for the country.

It would be a great blow to the Democracy if General Beaver's friends should succeed in persuading him to stop talking. The farther he travels and the more he talks the greater are the chances of Pattison's election. The Democratic state committee could afford to pay Beaver's traveling expenses just to keep him on the road.

The Democratic candidates were notified of their nomination on Friday of last week, by W. H. Snowden, chairman of the committee appointed for that purpose. The delay in sending a formal notice was caused by the members living in different sections of the State and the document was forwarded from one to the other for their signature and then returned to the chairman. It was signed by William H. Snowden, Malcom Hay, H. E. Packer, J. A. Cochran, Harman Yerkes, J. M. Thompson and George M. Dallas.

Last week by accident, a squib from the Philadelphia Press on Mr. Storm of Monroe county, found its way into our columns without the comments which we had intended to follow it. Its point of complaint against Mr. Storm was the common slangy one made against every public man who does not go to extreme lengths in his views upon taxing imports, namely, he was a free trader. Mr. Storm served some years since in Congress with much credit to himself and his district and whenever occasion shall require, can fully vindicate his votes while there. At present, he needs no defense against the Press or any other Republican journal, whether of the Stalwart or Half-breed persuasion.

DELEGATE ELECTION.

On Saturday, August 5th, the democrats of this county will elect delegates to the convention to be held on Tuesday, August 8th, to name candidates for the several county and district offices to be filled this fall. It is important that every member of the party should attend this election and cast his ballot for the candidates he desires to have nominated. It is too often the case that many fail to vote at delegate election, and after the nomnations are made, these same men find fault with the nominees. Every voter of intelligence has, or ought to have some preference among the candidates, and it is his duty to himself and his party to go to the primary election and express his choice. In this way only can the convention represent the voice of the people. When only a few vote for delegates, it makes the party merely a machine governed by a minority.

Another reason why there should be a full attendance is that under the rules of the party, chapter II, rule IX, where there is a tie vote in convention, made by instructions, the candidate who has received the highest popular vote shall be nominated. If we expect to get out a full vote at the general election, we must begin to work now, and there is nothing that will help along the good cause, by exciting interest in the campaign, more than by polling a big vote on August 5th. It will show that the democracy is still alive, and means business.

PATTISON,S ACCEPTANCE.

Robert E. Pattison has addressed the following letter to the committee of the democratic state convention appointed to notify him of his nomination as a candidate for the office of governor:

DEPARTMENT CITY CONTROLLER, PHILADELPHIA, July 24, 1882—GENTLEMEN: I have just received your letter of July 21, advising me of the action of the democratic state convention. I accept the nomiuation for governor, and if chosen for the office by the people I will strive to perform its duties to their satisfaction.

Respectfully yours,
ROBERT E. PATTISON

THE STANDING COMMITTEE.

The success of the campaign depends greatly upon the energy and activity of the standing committee. None but live men should be placed on the committee, men who will see that clubs are organized, that all democratic voters are registered, that proper places are provided for holding public meetings, and that no democrat remains at home on election day. To do all this requires time and labor, but when it is done, the result is that our majority increases. Every voting district should select a member who is capable and willing to undertake the labor of the position, and not be satisfied with a man who will take no interest in the matter, and who acts only as a figure head to fill the required number of members. It is certain that the democratic nominees of this county will be elected even if there were no standing committee. But the work that is to be done has an object beyond the county limits; it is the election of the state ticket. With victory more certain than it has been in twenty years, this is no time for trifling. Notwithstanding the dissensions in the ranks of our opponents, the Democracy must work without ceasing. But the standing committee cannot perform all that is to be done. They must have the earnest co-operation and assistance of every citizen who desires the overthrow of republican misrule and the establishment of an honest state government.

INSTRUCTION TICKETS.

By our county rules of nomination, delegates are required to come to Conventions with instructions for county officers, except Coroner and Auditors. Such are the only instructions required by the rules, but other instructions are allowed and if given are to be carried out and enforced in Convention. The only limitation in regard to voluntary instructions is, that the majority of the voters of a district present, are to participate in the proceeding of voting on such instructions.

It has been the practice to vote instructions upon all the principal offices for which nominations are made in Convention, and slip tickets for the delegate elections are prepared accordingly. So the sheet or slip ticket for the present year will contain names for President Judge, Congressman, Senator and Representatives, in the same manner as if they were county officers.

For all these offices, except the last, there will be no contest in the county (so far as we are informed); not because they are not very important ones and calculated to excite ambition, but because public opinion settled down early in favor of one particular person for each, to be endorsed by the county. Mr. McHenry having been chosen Senator two years ago to fill a vacancy, and having served at but one session, presents a reasonable claim upon the county to be recommended by it for renomination by the district conference. Senator Buckalew has urged no claim upon the Congressional nomination, but will be presented by this county because the nomination ought to claim and command him into the public service. Such men are needed at Washington, men who have had experience in public business and can be trusted to do honest public work. The nomination of President Judge is unopposed, and we must be permitted to use the language of another and say, that his continuance upon the Bench will honor the district as much as it will honor him. In advance of the convention we say nothing of contested nominations to be made by it, nor will we anticipate results in our Congressional and Senatorial districts; but upon the whole we have reason to anticipate the ultimate formation of an able and honorable district and county ticket for the support of the people.

Democratic State Committee

The recently appointed members of the democratic state committee, in response to a call of W. U. Hensel, the new chair man, met in the room of the Jefferson association, Harrisburg, Tuesday. Chairman Hensel called the meeting to order, and E. P. Kisner, secretary of the old committee, acted as secretary. A call of the roll showed forty-nine members present, the absentees being from Pittsburg and Allegheny. The committee then took action upon the contest of Messrs. Doyle and Matthews for representation from the Second district of Philadelphia. As each man had received the vote of three delegates from his district at the state convention, the difficulty was adjusted by placing each on the committee with the privileges of a half vote each.

The following resolution, offered by Mr. Burchfield, of Clearfield, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved. That the secretaries this day chosen shall be the officers of this committee when in session, and the chairman of the state committee shall have power to appoint such secretaries, stenographers and agents as he may deem proper to aid him in his personal work in charge of campaign.

Mr. Blackford, of York, offered the following, which was adopted without a dissenting voice:

Resolved. That the Chairman of the state committee shall have exclusive charge of the campaign. He may appoint such finance and executive committees as his judgment approves, and he may employ and pay special agents to aid in state organization in any section or county in the state.

It having been known by the committee that Chauncey F. Black, J. Simpson Africa and Mortimer F. Elliot, candidates for lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs and congressman-at-large, were in this city, a committee was appointed to wait upon these gentlemen and invite them to the meeting. Upon their arrival each made a brief address relative to the campaign, and after informal reports had been received from the different counties as to the outlook, which were of a very favorable character the committee adjourned.

At the Republican conference in the Forty-sixth Senatorial district on Friday last, the meeting was adjourned without making a nomination. There was a fight between Allison and Agnew. Another conference will be held at Pittsburg August 15.

Arabi's Letter to Gladstone.

Arabi Pasha wrote the following letter to Mr. Gladstone a few days before the bombardment of Alexandria, but Mr. Gladstone did not receive it until after the bombardment:

"The Koran commands us to resist if war is waged upon us. Hence England may rest assured that the first gun she fires in Egypt will absolve Egyptians from all treaties. The control will cease, the property of Europeans will be confiscated, the canals will be destroyed and the Jehad be preached in Syria, Arabia and India. The first blow with which England strikes Egypt will cause blood to flow through the breadth of Asia and Africa, the responsibility for which will be on the head of England. Egypt is still ready to be fast friends with England and keep her road to India, but she must keep within the limits of her jurisdiction. Finally, England may rest assured that we are determined to die for our country."

Thrice Branded.

During a discussion in the House of Representatives on Thursday last, Secor Robeson referred with a sneer to the deafness of W. E. Robinson Representative of the Second District of New York. Mr. Robinson was absent from the House, at the time. The next morning Mr. Robinson rose to a personal explanation, and said:

"I acknowledge, Mr. Speaker, that Providence has seen fit to afflict me, not exactly with deafness, but with hardness of hearing. I know of only one gentleman more to be pitied than I, and that is a certain gentleman who has had fastened on his head the charges of liar, thief, and perjurer, and was the only member who did not hear them."

This terrible retort, which stamped infamy on the forehead of the man against whom it was directed, and which was repeated for the third time within a few weeks, produced no visible effect on Secor Robeson

What must be the moral and the political condition of a party that accepts and honors as a leader a man who before the civilized world and in presence of his associates has been publicly denounced three times as a common felon by respectable and responsible members of the House?

There was a time in the life of the Republican party when great and humane principles inspired its action. If a foul reproach like this had been fastened on a Republican leader he would have been tried by drumhead court martial without delay and whipped out of camp at the tail of a cart.

Not so now. This man, publicly denounced as a "thief, liar, and perjurer," is tolerated by the party because it is known that he owns the Speaker, and treats him as a personal chattel; because he controls appropriations; because he is still powerful in the Navy; because he disposes of patronage; because he boasts of being a loyal and radical Republican; and because he is rich with ill gotten gains.—N. Y. Sun

Political Assessments.

The opinion of Attorney General Brewster on the subject of political assessments is generally treated by the press as if it were a judicial decision. It simply amounts to an interpretation of the law by the cabinet attorney for the guidance of officers of the United States government. It is altogether ex parte and does not at all settle the legal questions involved in the matter. The conclusions arrived at by the attorney general may be correct, but his opinion has no binding effect upon any body. If he had decided that a member of congress is an officer of the United States within the meaning of the statute he was called upon to interpret, Mr. Hubbell might still have gone on levying and collecting his assessments with perfect impunity. The courts and not the attorney general are the constitutional and rightful interpreters of the law.

But the opinion of the attorney general, though worthless as a judicial definition, serves to point a moral. Congress, it seems, has prohibited all other official representatives of the United States government except its own members from receiving contributions from federal officials for political purposes. The attention of congress is now called by an official paper to this important omission in the law. There is yet time before the adjournment of the present session to correct the matter. A supplementary bill should at once be passed to bring members of congress within the purview of the act. A measure of that kind, with no ambiguity or uncertainty in its phraseology, would be worth all the opinions of all the attorneys-general, past, present and to come The republicans of Pennsylvania should see to it that congress is at once strongly petitioned for the passage of such a bill. Both the stalwart and independent wings of the party have pronounced by solemn resolution against political assessments. They have made Hubbell a political issue in this state and that issue can best be settled by congress in the manner just indicated. Chairman McKee will, of course favor this proposition from pure principle and in order to strike a blow at the "Grant-Arthur-Conkling-Guiteau Cameron Stalwarts. Chairman Cooper will support it because it would prevent the republican congressional committee from poaching on his manor and would enable him to conduct his own blackmailing operations with greater success. In fact it would seem that such a bill ought not to meet with any opposition in congress or out of it.—Patriot.

Ex-Senator Buckalew.

WHAT HE THINKS OF THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

A representative of the Wilkesbarre Union-Leader recently interviewed Ex-Senator Buckalew with the following result:

Corr.—"What is your opinion Senator, of the ticket the democrats nominated at their recent state convention?"

"I think it an excellent ticket," was the response. "The convention could not well have made a better ticket."

Corr.—"Then you are acquainted with the candidates."

Mr. B.—"Yes, I know them all. Each is well fitted for the station for which he has been named. Mr. Pattison has made a most excellent record and developed no weaknesses. Mr. Black has much of the force of character and other elements of his father's strength. Mr. Africa has been tried and not found waiting. With Mr. Clark and Mr. Elliot I sat in constitutional convention, where I came to know them both intimately. Mr. Clark's father was James Clark, also of Indiana county. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1838, and therein did excellent service. He was also a canal commissioner, and left the board with credit, something not a few of those who held that position failed to do. The son was highly esteemed by his colleagues in the '73 convention. He is a first-class lawyer, and if elected, as he ought to be, will make a universally satisfactory judge. Mr. Elliott is what they call down east, a 'smart man,' by which I mean, not only book learned, but a man of powerful intellect, bright by nature. He is a man who would make his influence felt in congress, and I shall take great pleasure in giving him my support."

Corr.—"You are not then. Mr, Buckalew, among those who believe that Mr. Pattison being a young man will be against him? You are a veteran in party and public service and should know whether any of the older element of the party will refuse to support him on that account."

Mr. B—"Not at all! not at all! Mr. Pattison is all right. If he is a young man he has accomplished a great deal of good, for which he deserves to be rewarded. I have yet to hear the first democrat, old or young, say he will vote against him on any account. In fact all seem, not only satisfied, but especially well pleased with his nomination. In this county the party is entirely harmonious and hopeful. We shall as usual beat the enemy two to one when the polling day comes, and perhaps do better."

Corr.—"How is the split in the republican organization, as you view it, likely to effect the result?"

Mr. B.—"It will enhance, or rather has enhanced, the chances of Democratic success; not so much because there is reason to believe that the vote of the Independents will be a very large vote, as on account of the Democratic hopes inspired by the demoralization in the ranks of our opponents, and out of which will come a fuller Democratic poll than could otherwise be secured. When I was a candidate for Governor there were forty thousand Democrats who would not vote for Greeley and hence failed to come to the polls at all. Had I received those forty thousand votes I would have been elected."

Corr.—"Do you believe then that there are enough Democratic votes in the state to win, if they can be properly organized and held to their duty?"

Mr. B.—"I do. Certainly do. Frequent defeat has disheartened many of our people. The Republicans corrupt others, who could not, perhaps, be corrupted did they not feel, though wrongly, that voting the Democratic ticket would be throwing their strength away. There is more hopefulness this year, and less probability on that account, of this class of our people being brought away from us or entrapped into side movements. With first rate organization all over the state and a vigorous campaign, we have an excellent chance of electing our ticket.

Corr.—"What is your belief as to the likelihood of the two wings of the Republicans patching up a peace with each other and coming together?"

Mr. B.—"There is no apparent indication of their being able to do so, at least in so far as my observation goes. Both wings have made their beds, and as they are made they will probably lie in them. The regulars will undoubtedly rely, because they must rely, upon two things, in the conduct of their fight. First, the use of money and patronage, which they have reduced to an almost perfect system. (Arthur and Cameron are birds of a feather and will stand together through thick and thin. The former will help the latter by every means within his power.) And second, persistent partisan and personal appeals to every old-time Republican voter not to let the Democrats win simply because their own party is not just now what it ought to be."

Corr.—"Have you any fixed views as to what sort of a campaign we should prosecute on our side?"

Mr. B.—"I have been too busy with private and business matters lately to devote much thought to the subject. We must make an earnest fight and extend it into every corner of the state. The party press should not for a single issue relax its efforts and the candidates should take the stump. That much, at least, is clear to me. We have seldom had a better opportunity, and I am trustful that we shall be wise enough not to sacrifice it."

Plain Facts.

FIGURES THAT DO NOT LIE—TAXPAYERS CAN UNDERSTAND THIS ARGUMENT.

The Republican party came into power in this state in 1861, and the cost to the state government then was $947,-911,83, exclusive of interest and reduction of debt.

The Republican administration of Governor Curtin, even with all his enormously increased expenditures of war and the highest inflation of values known in this age, increased the state expenditures to only $1,531,486,67 in 1965.

In 1866 the Cameron machine entrenched itself in the Republican citadel and for fifteen years it has been supreme in every channel of Republican power in the state. With it came reckless profligacy; the creation of offices for favorites; the lavish waste of public money to reward partisan henchmen, and the absolute subordination of integrity and manhood to the cohesive power of public plunder.

In 1870, after three years of machine rule in the state, the annual expenditures in time of peace, had grown to $2,228,870,27, being an increase of $1,-281,058,44, over the expenses when the party assumed power, and an increase of $797,436,60 over the expenditures under Gov. Curtin, with the extraordinary demands of war to meet.

But the profligacy of boss government was not content with the expenditures of 1870. The Auditor General's report shows that the cost of the state government for 1880, including its share for the Legislature, foots up the enormous amount of $4,962,105,59. Being more than the entire cost of the government in 1860, when the Republican party first attained power.

This expenditure does not embrace either interest or principal of public debt. It is simply the regular annual expenditure of the state government.

There is a legitimate increase in schools and judiciary, made by the constitution, but that is little more than half a million, and the other expenditures are mainly or wholly the creation of machine legislation.

The people of Pennsylvania have lately been carefully reading and considering the record made by Controller Pattison in Philadelphia, and they have learned that his entry into the controller's office dated the beginning of the practical reform that has changed the city from a $2,25 tax rate and three millions annual increase of debt, with little or no improvments, to a $1,95 tax rate, and annual surplus of a million, and substantial improvements in every department, and that is just the sort of an administration they want in Pennsylvania.

The new piers for the railroad bridge across the Susquehanna on the Cumberland Valley Railroad at Harrisburg will cost about $4,000 each when completed.

More Riotous Italians.

On Thursday there was trouble on the new railroad near Jersey Mills. Messrs Kane, Baker and Batchelor drove out a half mile from Jersey Mills to pay off, for the month of June, a body of one hundred Italians. The contractors had with them about $5,000, and when they were on point of commencing to pay out the Italians demanded their pay up to the date. This being refused a peculiar brigandish whistle was given, when every man knocked his pick from the handle and rushed toward the contractors, who, seeing their danger, drove off to Jersey Mills, where the Italians were paid for the month of June. It is the intention of Messrs. Baker, Bachelor and Kane to pay these fellows off and get rid of them by bringing into their places Hungarians.

Married to a Negro.

A YOUNG WHITE WOMAN ARRESTED FOR TAKING A SECOND HUSBAND.

WILKESBARRE, Pa, July 25.

A good deal of excitement was caused to day in certain social circles by the news of the arrest of a handsome young white woman, not more than twenty, on a charge of bigamy, her second husband being a big, burly negro, as black as night and one of the most ignorant of his class. The charge was made by the woman's mother.

About two years ago Anna Seibert was wooed and won by a well to do mechanic, named Morgan, of this city. Some few months since Morgan moved to Pottsville, taking his wife with him. The latter used to come here frequently to see her mother, and during these visits she met and fell desperately in love with the negro, who was a common laborer in the employ of a tar-roofer. The darkey's name is Sam Taylor. He knew that the woman was married, but on the 3rd of July he induced her to go before a colored Methodist preacher in this city, named Evans, who married them. It is believed that Evans was not aware of the previous marriage of the woman.

When the matter came to the mother's knowledge she pleaded with her daughter to leave her second husband and return to her home. On her refusal to do this promptly the mother had her arrested upon the charge of bigamy. She was taken before Magistrate Bulkley, but before any proceedings were had she repented and agreed to leave the negro and go home with her mother. The mother is nearly distracted, while intense excitement exists among the friends of the daughter, some swearing vangeance upon the negro for marrying her. The girl is young, pretty and intelligent, and it is said that she will go back to her colored husband at the first opportunity.

Solomon Kemmerer, aged about forty years, an industrious iron ore teamster, residing near Macungie, Lehigh county, was found about 7 o'clock Monday evening hanging in his barn. After the fight Seibert left threatening to have his father-in-law arrested. It appears that this preyed upon the poor man's mind to such an extent that he committed suicide. Riley & Co. intend erecting a handsome dwelling for their efficient superintendent, Edward Reese.—Mt. Carmel News.

The Law.—Tax collectors seem to have the most difficulty in collecting taxes from single men and tenants who own no real estate. The law provides a remedy which if enforced would assist collectors. It is as follows:

"If any person shall neglect or refuse to make payment of the sum charged to him for township rates or levies, it shall be lawful for the collector thereof, having first obtained a warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace of the county to collect the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such delinquent, giving ten days' public notice of such sale, by written or printed advertisements; and in case goods and chattels sufficient to satisfy the same with the costs, cannot be found, such collector shall be authorized to take the body of such delinquent to the jail of the proper county, there to remain until the amount so charged, together with the costs, shall be paid or secured to be paid, or until he shall be otherwise discharged by due course of law.

The camp meeting of the Bloomsburg circuit, A. M. E. Church, will be held at Rupert, beginning on Sunday August 6th, and continuing for nine days.

Hon. E. J. EcHenry is announced in another column as a candidate for State Senator. As there is no other candidate for the office in this county, the conferees will be unanimously instructed for him.

All persons who have relatives buried in the Episcopal Church yard, should make arrangements to have them removed as soon as possible. The spot has long been an eyesore and no improvements can be made in it until all the dead are removed.

A party of twenty-seven young ladies and gentlemen went to Megargell's grove on Wednesday afternoon for a picnic. Buckalew Bros' four horse band wagon was the mode of conveyance. The party returned about half past eleven and report that they had a delightful time.

There will be no evening service at the Episcopal Church until about September 1st. As the rector holds service at Catawissa and Frosty Valley on alternate Sunday afternoons, the vestry requested him to omit the evening service during the hot weather.

Dogs ought to be muzzled this season of the year. The fact that no one has ever been bitten by a mad dog in this town is no assurance that they never will be, and it is best to take the necessary precaution in time. The town council should pass a muzzle ordinance.

If you want a copy of the History of Columbia County now is the time to subscribe. It will be a book of about 500 pages, and will cost $2.50 in cloth binding, $3.00 half morocco, and $3.50 full sheep, and will be ready for delivery sometime next fall. Send your name to the Columbian office, Bloomsburg, Pa.

The first number of the Democratic Sentinel, a new paper just started at Laporte, Sullivan county, has reached us, and it gives promise of being a success. It is neatly printed and contains far greater evidences of animation than its older contemporary. W. H. McCarty is the editor and proprietor.

F. M. Everett and wife, Eli Knorr and wife, K. C. Eat and wife, and some friends spent two weeks up the creek, about twelve miles above Benton. They caught between six hundred and seven hundred trout. F. M. Everett alone caught three hundred and ninety-five. The largest trout measured ten inches. Rev. W. W. Evans and family and L. T. Sharpless and his family were also at the same place for a few days, and were alike successful in taking trout.

A correspondent of the Wilkes Barre Leader makes a singular mistake in commenting on the politics of this county. He says that Sheriff Ent "will not be renominated, and having sense enough to know it, has not asked a nomination." It is true that Sheriff Ent has not asked for a renomination. He does not deem it worth while for him to spend any time seeking a second term of office from the fact that the constitution of Pennsylvania, Article sixth, Section one, provides that "no person shall be twice chosen sheriff in any term of six years." Perhaps they have a different constitution in Luzerne county.

A Big Fraud.—It is announced that the Auditor appointed by the Court of Lycoming county, to ascertain the indebtedness of the Lycoming Fire Insurance Company at Muncy, reports the amount at three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000), and he believes that there are unreported claims of not less than $60,000. What gross mismanagement and a huge fraud this company proves to be! Scores of the citizens of Clearfield county have been robbed by this bankrupt concern. The officers deserve a seat in the penitentiary for the fraud they have practiced on the public.—Clearfield Republican.

John Sharpless came to this country in 1682, and landed on the 24th of August at the mouth of Ridley Creek this State, two months earlier than William Penn did. He proceeded up the creek to a point about one mile and a half northwest from the present site of the City of Chester, where he felled a large tree and made a house of the boughs. There he and his wife lived six months, while they constructed a cabin against the side of a rock. There were seven children born to them, and after 200 years have elapsed it is estimated that there are not less than 25,000 decendants of this pioneer. The family are thickly settled in and around Philadelphia, in Delaware and Chester counties, and it is proposed to celebrate the bi-centennial of the landing of the original Sharpless in August by a family reunion.

The Watermelon Cure.

The watermelon contains ninety-five per cent. of the purest water, and a trace of pure sugar, and nothing has yet been discovered that furnishes so perfect and speedy a cure for summer complaint as watermelon and nothing else. Even when diarrhœa has become chronic, this delicious beverage—for it is little more—watermelon, taken freely, two or three times a day, has again and again, been known to work wonders, and to "cure" when all the usual remedies had failed.

Democratic Club.

A meeting of the Democratic voters of the Town of Bloomsburg will be held at Evans' Hall on Saturday evening July 29th at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a club in the interest of the Democracy and the Democratic State ticket. All are earnestly invited to attend.

Let there be a full turn out.

The N. & W. B. Shops.

It is more than probable that the repair shops of the above branch of the Pennsylvania road will be located at Coalmont, opposite Shickshinny. Sufficient ground has been tendered to the company by the Nicely estate upon which to locate the shops and put in switches. In conversation with a gentleman who is intimately connected with the building of the road he said that the company would no doubt take advantage of the offer and locate the shops. The line will be extended on to Hawley, Wayne county, and it is natural to suppose that company would wish to have the shops as far up the line as practicable.—Shickshinny Echo.

From the Forks.

Jerry Artwine, an employee at Beishline Bros' steam saw-mill, met with a very serious accident last Thursday, resulting in the dislocation of his right shoulder, and otherwise bruising and injuring himself. Dr. Megargle is attending him and he is doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. Peter Kline lost a valuable horse on Wednesday night of last week.

Mr. John Hull, while engaged in building a timber slide down the mountain last week, was very badly cut with an ax on the left knee. We are glad, however, to see that he is able to be about again.

The Campaign Columbian.

We will send the Columbian to any address in the county, from now until after the fall election for 30 cents. As this will be an unusually interesting campaign every Democratic voter should take a paper and keep himself posted. There is not a man in the county who cannot afford to take the Columbian at that price, and we hope to receive many orders. Postage stamps can be sent by mail.

Catawissa Items.

Miss Maggie Manley of Ashland, was visiting friends in town last week.

Candidates for political honors are the most active set of fellows that can be found anywhere. Even old Fahrenheit standing at 95 does not seem to affect them one bit. Well, we are rapidly approaching the 5th of August when the question of "which shall be who" and "who shall be which" must be decided.

Sheriff Ent was out in the country on Monday paying a welcome visit, as usual, to some of his friends.

A party of about fifty picniced on the "Bluffs" last Friday afternoon. They all report as having had a delightful time.

A match game of base ball was played in Shuman's field on Saturday afternoon between the Catawissa nine and a nine from Riverside. The game stood 11 to 13 in favor of the latter.

Your townsman, Frank Smith, spent some time here last Saturday and among other things took in the game of base ball. Call again Frank. Parvenu.

The Coming Great Show.

With what impatience, reader, be you professor, printer, banker or baker, tutor or tailor, doctor, or drayman, merchant or miller, farmer or freedman, dentist or devil—printer's devil we mean—benedict or bachelor, old maid or matron, old or young, short or tall, or anybody at all, must you now be waiting for the coming to Bloomsburg on Saturday August 5th of Hilliard & Demott's great show. On that memorable day let "loathed melancholy" come and be provoked to laugh, let the learned come to learn, the grave not undervalue, and the wise and good not forbear commending it. We swerve not a jot from the truth, asserting it the culmination of all that curiosity could wish, or fancy picture; all that the most critical could ask or sanguine anticipate; what the scholar can consider with advantage, and the unlearned study with great profit; what the children adore and adults applaud; what brightens the eye of age and adds lustre to the ingenuous countenance of youth. what dispels the shadows of sadness and adds glee to the laugh of gladness; what effaces the crow's-feet of care and for a time makes all forget the stern realities of life and live at least a few bright hours in fancy's realm. Come and see the wonders of zoology, the huge elephants, the towering camels, the ferocious tigers, the lordly lions, the mammoth aviary, the daring bareback riders, the fearless gymnasts of mid-air, the lithe leapers, the funny fools, and innumerable other wonders, the most entertaining and delighting ever presented under canvas.

A game of base ball was played at this place on Saturday by the Catawissa boys and Mifflin boys, which resulted in a score of 17 to 90, in favor of Mifflin.

Among the items we are generally able to advertise at least one festival at each time. The next one will be held on Saturday evening, 29 inst. in Creasy's grove near Snyder's school house, for the benefit of the Bomboy Sunday school.

To the Public.

Mr. Editor.

Some maliciously disposed person or persons have been circulating a story to the effect that there exists among the merchants of Orangeville a combination to put up prices of goods and keep down the price of produce. Now as far as we are concerned the report is absolutely false, as we are not a party to any such combination and have no knowledge of it; on the contrary, we will sell goods as low as any other store in the county and will pay the highest market price, either merchandise or cash, for all kinds of country produce. We are beginners in the town and will not be undersold, as the following prices will prove: calicos from 4½ to 8 cts, oil calicos from 9 to 11 cts, lawns 6 to 12½ cts, ginghams 8 to 11 cts. We sell Renfrew and Canton ginghams (the best dress ginghams in the market), for 10 cts per yard, and have numerous pieces to select from; buntings, all colors, from 12 to 20 cts, muslin, bleached and unbleached, 5 to 13 cts, Ticking 12 to 25 cts, and a full line of Debeiges, poplin lustres, mixed goods and cashmeres ranging from 10 cts to $1.25. Mens' and boys' wool and fur hats from 60 cts to $2.00, mens' and boys' straw hats 5 cts to $1.00, sugar from 8 to 11 cts, coffee 12 to 20 cts, tea from 25 to 75 cts, soaps, spices, iron, fish, nails, &c., at correspondingly low prices. Now to you who are purchasers we have only this to say, before you give any credit to stories that may be in circulation, come and see us and prove our words true or false. The above list is only a specimen of our prices, we sell everything else equally as low. Now to you having lumber to sell we will buy it and give you the advantage of these low prices in exchange for your stock or pay you cash. And to you who may want to buy lumber we say we are dealing in a full stock of lumber that at our prices will pay you to visit our yard before you purchase elsewhere, and now to all who are led to giving us a call by reading this card will give you a box of toilet soap containing three cakes. If you will give us a trial we guarantee you satisfaction—we are closing out all our white goods at cost.

Yours Respectfully,
Lilley & Sleppy,
Orangeville, Pa.

Plenty of readymade dresses of such sorts as are most in demand now, viz., substantial and not costly.

Also plenty of white muslin dresses below value; and a fair variety of the more costly stuff dresses.

1201 and 1203 Chestnut.

There is no danger of overstating the advantage in buying black grenadines now. There is a clear dollar a yard to be gained in most of the rich ones.

Next outer circle, south entrance to main building.

Dress-goods trade with us is now very largely upon goods below value. Checks, check-stripes, melanges, debeige, and others, are at half and two-thirds. Not all we have; we don't mean that; some of all these and other sorts. And low prices are no reflection on the goods. Whatever we buy low we sell low. Of course we lose money on goods sometimes. We are not talking about that now.

Second and third circles, southeast from center.

Cream cashmere shawls of $5 quality, with here and there a dark thread just visible a yard off, $3.50. India chuddas that cost five or ten times as much have such little imperfections. Imitation chuddas are made with them purposely. But, as they don't belong to cashmeres, we sell as above.

1203 Chestnut.

It is wonderful how dress-goods have dropped here. Fine-wool and silk-and-wool things at two-thirds; some even at half; the best things in the store at that. Literally true! What in all dress goods is better than a fine debeige? We have one at 50 cents that is well worth a dollar. What has proved better this season than small-check effects? Why, we have thirty sorts at two-thirds and below. What better than a fine melange? Two-thirds; and fifty to choose from. There is no exhausting them.

Many counters, southeast from center.

Honeycomb and dimity bedspreads, $1.10 to $1.45. Fine-wool blankets as large and light as you like, $5 to $11.

Southwest corner of main building.

Colored skirts down; poplin, stripes, chambrey, etc. The very best, except seersucker, are $1; seersucker not much more.

One of the busiest corners in the store is that of muslin underwear. We are being rewarded for our patient pursuit of good quality in it.

West of south entrance to main building.

ECONOMY PROSPERITY, SUCCESS.

Some years ago we learned the lesson that farmers could not afford to pay high prices for Fertilizers, that a first-class Phosphate properly ammoniated, must be produced for nearly half the price of those then in the market.

Necessity, the mother of invention, was upon us, and our efforts of years was about to be given to the public in the shape of our TWENTY-FIVE DOLLAR PHOSPHATE.

This article combines all the necessary elements to produce a good crop of Wheat, and feed the soil abundantly for the grass which is to follow the next year.

When this article was first introduced it was said that it could not be produced at the price at which we were selling it, but thanks to the cash buying public who have favored us with constantly increasing orders which has enabled us to produce in a large way that which cannot be done in any other.

Scotch ginghams of fine-check patterns, so fine as to look like plain colors, and even plain colors are in great favor. 25 and 30 cents. The handkerchief patterns so popular last year at 31 cents are now 15.

American ginghams that usually sell for 15 are now 10.

Next outer circle, north from center.

Figured and dotted soft mulls very low: 50 and 75 cents instead of 75 to $1.50.

Everything in fine muslins and Hamburg embroideries.

Third and fourth circles, City-hall square entrance.

Belgian pillow linen and sheeting, almost white; almost as white as Irish; and a dollar goes as far in them as a dollar-and-a-quarter in Irish. New have just come; and it is a good time to emphasize the advantage we always give in such ways. Indeed we consult your interest more than any other way by drawing from each country its best, and by rejecting whatever we can get better from another source,

Summer Work on Trees.

TREES IN SUMMER TIME.—Time is always precious on a farm. All hands seem to have work awaiting their attention. From this cause, as well as others, work does not always get properly finished. If it is thought that "it will do," many minor matters are let go undone. Thus in planting trees, the tree may be properly planted, but the little matters afterwards, which do so much to make the planting a success, are unthought of. Unless trees are replanted with all the roots they have which they seldom are, they need to be kept cool and moist for a season at least. A great many trees are lost every year by not getting roots enough to begin with, and not heading in enough when setting them out; and then perhaps forgetting to place stones around the tree to keep it in place, and mulch to hold moisture, and then again hilling up around the tree, when the ground should be little lower near the tree in order to hold the rain and moisture that fall. It is safe to say that thousands of trees are lost every year for want of care and good judgement in setting. Better take a little more time and see that the earth is well packed under the centre of the tree, and the time afterwards to place a mulch or hay or coarse manure around them to pass them safely through the season.

SUMMER PRUNING TREES.—There is a great advantage in summer pruning over that of winter or spring, as has been shown before in our columns. In the spring time, or the growing season, the finger and thumb can do all the pruning necessary. It does what the saw and knife has to do later on. The tree is easily brought into shape by nipping off a shoot or pulling one off here and there. Fifteen minutes is as good as an hour in the winter time. It seems that very many fruit growers fail to appreciate the great advantages of finger pruning. Pinching the young and growing shoots has long been practiced as a means of promoting growth and shape of trees. French horticulturists long ago demonstrated its entire practicability in the formation of beautiful trees. Barry and others in this country have often called attention to its great importance, but yet the professional fruit grower, as well as the laity, seem to have overlooked its advantages to a great extent. If summer pruning were more general, there would be fewer half dead orchards and shade trees than there now are.

ANNUAL CROPS OF FRUIT.—The man who has a large orchard, in time finds his trees bearing every other year. It may be that a cold storm causes the loss of all blossoms one year, thus throwing all the trees into bearing the next year. The fruit trees are partly exhausted by their fruiting, and do not bear the season following as a consequence. If any one would take the trouble to take off all but a moderate lot of the young fruit as soon as set in the spring, the trees would, no doubt, bear well the following year. By shearing off all the blossoms, or the young fruit when no larger than cherries, the bearing year has been changed on young trees. While the orchard is coming into bearing, the change is easily affected, and the labor is not great. It would be too expensive and laborious on old trees; the change on these is more difficult, and the labor is wasted. Sheep shears are the most convenient for the work. Knocking the young apples off with poles bruises the trees. It would be worth while to try the experiment of removing the young crop when in blossom, and also after the fruit has set, and observe which answers the desired purpose best. One thing must be kept in mind, that a tree loaded down with fruit cannot be expected to bear a crop the following year.—Tribune & Farmer.

The Turnip Crop.

No crop makes better returns for labor bestowed than turnips. The seed may be sowed any time from the first of June throughout August, in many localities below the isothermal, of, say the north line of Connecticut. It may be sowed broadcast, in drills or rows, or as a "cattle crop," among corn; or turnips may be used to seed grass with, sowing both the turnip and grass about August 1st. For turnip alone the preparation of the ground is simple. It needs good plowing and harrowing if in fair heart; but a dressing of 400 pounds of bone dust or 250 pounds of superphosphate to the acre will almost insure a good crop. We rarely have such dry weather that turnips will not start in July, and soon as they make leaf, heavy dews seem to be enough to keep them growing, but fast year was an exception in this part of the country In many fields turnip seed on dry ground did not germinate, or at least did not make any show above ground.

In sowing turnips broadcast the greatest care must be taken to have them thin enough. A pound of seed to the acre is all that should be sowed, and this should be divided, the whole piece being sowed twice at right angles. In Europe the seedsmen use old seed baked, or baked rape seed, to mix with turnip seed as an adulteration. If we could buy here such old baked seed so as to mix it ourselves—say five pounds of baked with one of live seed, and thus be able to make a fair cast, instead of throwing little pinches of seed as we now do, it would save a good deal of trouble. Sowed in drills, turnips must be thinned. Much rank manure gives a strong, bad flavor. Turnips ought never to have the first chance at a dressing of yard or stable manure, but to come in as a second crop. As to varieties, there are two widely different classes, and intermediate varieties without number which it is hard to classify. Swedish or Russian turnips, generally known as "Ruta-bagas" or "Swedes," are a very distinct, hard-fleshed, glossy leaved kind, occurring in many varieties, that need better soil, earlier sowing and better culture than the soft fleshed or English turnip, which is rough-leaved, grows most rapidly, is a voracious feeder, doing well and making a bulky watery crop where Swedes would do very little, and yet it is a question whether the small crop of Swedes would not contain nearly as much nutriment as the soft turnips. Between these two extremes of hard-fleshed and soft-fleshed kinds are many varieties partaking in a measure of the hard-fleshed character of the Swedes, but generally regarded and treated as belonging to the common or English species. Such are the "Yellow-globe," Yellow-stone," "Dutch," etc. As a rule it is best to sow Swedes as early as the first of July, the "Globe" and "Stone" turnips as early as the 25th, and the soft turnips, "Strap-leafed flat," "Cow-horn," etc., by the 10th of August. The last named is the best to seed down to grass with, and on good soil, not clayey, turnips and clover seed may be mixed together, using about 15 pounds of clover seed, because some will winter kill.—[American Agriculturist.

Brahma Fowls.

As a class they are more strictly domestic than any other, being gentle and quiet in their disposition, easily confined, hardy, doing better in the Middle and Northern States than at the South. The Brahmas are considered more hardy than the Cochins, being closer feathered, and the cocks, having no single comb, it is not liable to be frozen, which misfortune ruins their appearence and detracts from their value in cold climates, with such accommodations as are ordinarly provided for them. They are good layers, and a flock of a dozen hens, with fair attention, may be depended upon for eggs every week in the year. They are first-rate setters, and quiet, gentle mothers; easily handled and cared for. The chicks are hardy, and grow very fast. A two pound Brahma chick can be grown quicker than any other; they are good broilers. After this it is better to keep them until five or six months old, when they will weigh from five to seven pounds each. A Brahma chick will require about one-third more feed than the smaller breeds, which is amply repaid in increased size and weight.—Country Gentleman

The Sunday Law.

The Supreme Court recently expounded what is known as the Sunday law with regard to subscriptions. The decision arose out of a subscription made at a meeting on a Sabbath day and afterwards repudiated on the ground that it was not legal, being made on the Sabbath day. Suit was brought. The doctrine of the court is, that subscriptions for church purposes made on the Sabbath day, whether to build churches, or pay ministers, or organists, or sextons, or for any other purpose connected with the benevolent or religious operations of churches do not come under the category of "worldly employment or business" intended to be forbidden by the statute, but are properly included in "works of charity," which are not prohibited, and hence, that such subscriptions are legal obligations that may be enforced by a court of justice.

Not an alcoholic beverage, but a true and reliable family medicine is Brown's Iron Bitters.

☞When farmers can buy a true Ammoniated Super-Phosphate, made chiefly from Slaughter House Meat and Bone, for $25 per ton at the Railroad Depots, in Philadelphia, it is a folly to pay out money for the old fashioned High Cost Fertilizers, which other manufacturers persist in holding at prices varying from Thirty to Forty Dollars per ton.

The past season, everywhere, has early shown, that the low cost Ammoniated Super-Phosphate paid the best on Wheat and Grass. The day for high-cost Manures has passed. The experience of good farmers, who look closely at First Cost and Results, have proved that those costing $25 PER TON, OR LESS, with a reasonably good Analysis of free Phosphoric Acid AND AMMONIA, have paid them by far the best. There is abundant evidence of this and from farmers who don't simply guess at what they are doing.

In the four years of the use of Baugh's $25 Phosphate, there has not been a single reasonable report of unfavorable action on any crop, and this is a testimony in itself more than volumes of certificates. We do not ask for, or publish certificates; that custom, has long ago ceased to be of any consequence either way.
